

Hi, This document has take a considerable time to be assembled by individual knowledgeable officers. To read, absorb and make comment on it in its current form is more than painful. The standard Government mistake of dividing the workload up into specialist areas and then allocating it to different Departments is wasteful and not cost effective for industry. I want a one stop office where all my questions and your queries can be dealt with by one group at virtually the same time. I want to see clear flow sheets of how your proposed changes will operate and be able to compare it to flow sheets of the current model. I want to be able to contribute to the design not be given a design and restricted to making and answering factious questions. With Regards Norm McCleary
